

but the Mayor very properly refused to give them up, and directed the Texian officer and his men to leave the territory of the United States forthwith. The Mayor then sent the two Mexicans to N. Orleans, whence they would embark in the first vessel for Tampico.

Col. Burr—M. L. Davis, and the Ladies.—The Harpers have published the first volume of the "Memoirs of Aaron Burr, by M. L. Davis," which will be read with avidity by the public. It is a work of great importance and interest and calculated to produce no small degree of excitement. The New York Star, in alluding to Mr Davis, says—

"The first volume of his life of Aaron Burr is finished. It is a book of deep interest, and there are some facts, relative to the course pursued by his biographer, which are too honorable not to be known."

"Whatever military and civic talent the world has awarded to Aaron Burr, his moral character never ranked high. Burr, like Richelieu, Mazarin, and many modern diplomatists, had great confidence in the agency of women to bring about political events, but Burr carried his doctrines further than were diplomatic agencies, the result of which was an extensive correspondence with ladies of high rank and character, both in this country and in Europe—a correspondence which, if brought to light, would have created the most painful excitement in families. Mr Davis, in the most honorable manner, committed them all to the flames, excepting one package from a lady of fortune and high character in this city, which he reserved for a little triumph. The letters alluded to, were of such a character as to leave no doubt of the terms on which the lady and Col. Burr had lived; but unfortunately, in one of them, the lady in referring to Mr Davis, very spitefully and unceremoniously gave it as her opinion, that he should long ago have been sent to the penitentiary."

"Mr Davis very carefully collected the letters, tied them up in an envelope, and called on the lady at her residence, in ——— Place. "I have," said he, "destroyed a number of letters of a very delicate nature, which were in the possession of Col. Burr; but lest, madam, there should be any apprehension on your mind that your letters, by accident, have been mislaid, I have here brought the package, that you may be certain that you have yourself the evidence of their destruction." So saying, with a low bow, he took leave of the lady, who was too much overwhelmed with surprise and alarm, to make any reply; and when a few days afterwards, she whisked by him in her carriage, she drew her veil hastily over her face, and fell back against the cushions."

An Eastern Love Letter.—The following is a copy of a love letter from Princess Abassa to Gafar al Barmeki, which we find in the delightful novel just published by the Harpers, entitled "Gafar al Barmeki":—

"I had resolved to keep my love concealed within my bosom, but it escapes, and declares itself in spite of my efforts."

"The light wind as it visits thy dwelling carries with it my burning sigh, and the dew of midnight mingles with my tears, when I think upon thee image in the garden. Triumph, if you will, in my secret and my shame, but know the tyrant love reigns in my heart and moulds me at its will."

In the New Hampshire Legislature last week, a bill was introduced taxing dogs, hogs and old bachelors.

A negro outbreak in New Jersey.—A violent riot broke out at Swetznorth, in New Jersey, on Sunday night. A family of colored people in the neighborhood were arrested as fugitive slaves by one Donahoe, who exercised the respectable calling of a slave hunter in Philadelphia; carried before a justice, and detained, at a Mr. Johnson's hotel till Monday, for trial. The alleged slaves, we are informed, were confined in the cellar of the tavern and were in irons. About 11 o'clock at night the house was attacked by about forty negroes, came to the rescue of their confined brethren. A discharge of musketry and a volley of clubs and stones were the first intimations that the unsuppressing and afflicted landlord received. The household was immediately aroused and shrank terror-struck to the garret and other private parts of the building. The windows were broken out and the building riddled with bullets and large musket shot. The landlord defended his house as far as he was able, but he had no arms save a light fowling piece. He discharged it several times and wounded one or more—how badly he knows not. During the affray, an English soldier, who lodged in the hotel, and who in his fight the landlord took for one of his assailants, was dangerously wounded in the knee. On Monday, the blacks were carried before the magistrate, and remanded, as a material witness was absent.—N. Y. Era.

Savage Murder.—The Louisville City Gazette contains the annexed account of a horrible outrage in the very precincts of a Court of Justice:—

"We understand that Phil. Thompson, Esq. was killed in Owensboro last week. The circumstances were about as follows:—A large fire having occurred, by which much valuable property was consumed, certain suspected individuals were put upon trial before a Court of Inquiry for the arson.—A carpenter, by the name of We have learned, of Jefferson, was called to the stand as a witness, and his testimony having been dwelt upon with severity by Mr. Thompson, he retired from the Court, and procuring a Bowie knife met Thompson as he came from the court, and inflicted upon him many mortal wounds, of which he died immediately. Mr. Thompson was a man of fine genius, and had garnered up a considerable harvest of professional fame and individual wealth."

A Shoplifter in High Life.—A French lady who is supposed to be worth $50,000, was detected at New York on Friday, as we learn from the Journal of Commerce, in stealing a cap from a store, after having previously stolen another from another store. As such conduct warranted a visit from the police, an officer went to her residence, and found a room, the floor of which was covered with the most incongruous assortment of items, dead fowls, ladies' shawls, gentlemen's caps, cakes of soap, Carolina potatoes, pieces of muslin, and an almost endless variety of small matters of one sort or other, which, as she could have little or no use for, and her parsimonious disposition renders it improbable that she purchased them, it is supposed they have been all, or the greater part of them, stolen. She was held to bail.

Premature Funeral.—A late Brussels paper states, that on the Sunday night previous, a respectable citizen fell into so profound a lethargy, that his friends and medical attendants thought he was dead. His body was therefore laid out with the usual ceremonies, and placed on Monday in a bier. The assistants were on the point of screwing down the coffin to convey it to the church, when the man awoke, rubbed his eyes, and called for his coffee and newspaper, much to the disappointment of the priests, who were robbed of their fees, and of the heirs, who had already divided his succession.

The Galaxy and Pearl.—An arrangement has been effected with Isaac C. Pray, Jr., of the Boston Pearl, by which that paper will be united to the Galaxy, to be issued under the title of "The Boston Pearl and Galaxy." By this coalition of papers and editors, a very large list will be created, and the receipts will be sufficient to enable the Publishers to fulfil extensive plans for the interest of their paper, while an addition of talent will be made to the Editorial department, which will not fail, it is hoped, to ensure variety and spirit.—Galaxy.

Going ahead.—The people of Natchez have subscribed seventy thousand dollars towards the capital stock, for the construction of a steam ship to run between New York and Natchez.

The wife of a British Admiral now on a foreign station, was lately brought up before the London Police, and fined five shillings for getting drunk.

Germinating Powers of Wheat.—It has been found that the grains of wheat discovered in the envelopes of the Egyptian mummies, dipped in oil and planted deep in a rich soil, have grown and produced seed abundantly!

India Rubber Manufacturers.—There were manufactured in the country during the past year, one hundred and thirty million yards of American prints!

Shaving.—A barber, who is said to be one of the tobacco crop gentlemen's dressed by the front.

Barilla Cow.—A cow with a calf four or five weeks old, barilla, lately sold at Mobile for $310.

POLICE COURT.

Mysterious Affair.—A young gentleman, sporting a cloth cap, with a tassel, and elegant brown frock, answered to the name of Francis Bay, and was charged by watchman Tallant with being a dangerous and disorderly person, to which he pleaded guilty. There appeared to be a great deal of mystery, and much more than met the eye in this case. The words—"The Methodist meeting-house"—"a young lady"—"a pile of boards," &c. were incoherently uttered by sundry witnesses; but they did not pretend to show any positive connection between them and the prisoner. He, too, by pleading guilty, seemed desirous to have the judgment pronounced sub silentio. Witnesses however, were attempted to be examined, the most explicit—or, more correctly speaking, seeing as how neither of them had any pretensions to explicitness—the least explicit witness, said that he saw a number of men standing around the prisoner and a young lady, and making some sort of a jeering. The prisoner had drawn a sword cane, which he extended towards them, and saying—"If you venture one step further towards me, I'll run you through the ——— [The word we have delicately omitted for the dash, as it was not entirely classical;] but we will attempt a genteel paraphrase of the whole of this lost member of the throat—e. g. I'll phibetomize your umbilical region; or, I'll drill an eye-hole in your abdominal magazine.] He also presented his sword at the watch, but immediately surrendered, when he was informed of his official dignity. The lady in the meantime evaporated. When called on for his defence, the prisoner could not be induced to go back further than the period of the arrival of the watch at the scene; he could not be made to take the hint that the Court wanted to know if there was any reason why the people should follow him as they had done. It was in vain that his honor assured him, that if they had evil-entreated him, they might be punished. It was plain, that he would much rather his tormentors should go unscathed, than that he should be driven to disclose the cause, why they annoyed him. His honor asked him how he came to plead guilty. He replied, because the watch had told him, that it was against the law to carry a sword cane. His honor replied, that there was no law against carrying such an instrument, and if he had pleaded guilty, through mistake of the law, he was at liberty to retract. Thus instructed upon his legal rights, he retracted his plea of guilty, and pleaded the reverse. The trial was then recommenced, but with as little success as before, so far as the fatal origin was concerned. He was therefore adjudged to have drawn his sword, and threatened to use it, but for why or what, was only known to himself. The act was prima facie a technical assault, and he was sentenced to pay a nominal fine of $1.00.

He appeared to be a right minded youth, and seemed to be very much ashamed at being caught in the street with a sword cane, for he kept his cap up before his face throughout the trial. We presume the sword cane was the cause of his abashedness, because nothing else was positively proved against him, nor did he even hint at any other cause.

Doubtful Judgment.—Quite a notorious young man, named William Otway, pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing $11.00, from William Ball and was sentenced to two months imprisonment in the House of Correction. He was quite satisfied with this unexpectedly mild sentence, and laughed merrily with a friend about it; and well he might, if we understand the case. As he pleaded guilty, the Court did not deem it necessary to examine any witnesses; but there is little doubt, that the offence was highway robbery, punishable by confinement in the State Prison for life. We understand from the complainant, and the officer, that Otway and Ball met in a bar-room, in the north part of the city, where the former perceived that the latter had money. When they came out, Otway asked Ball to let him see what banks his bills were on; and when Ball took the bills out to show them to him, he snatched them out of his hand, and ran off. If this be true, the case ought to come before the Grand Jury, and it is the sworn duty of any Grand Juror who hears of it, to cause it to be inquired into by his fellows. The fact that he has already been convicted of a larceny in the Police Court, is no bar to an indictment for the felony, if the transaction should turn out to be one.

Within a week, the wench had twice driven Nancy Pierce, alias Dumphy, home. On Saturday night she was in company with some sailors, and said she belonged to a vessel. "What have you to say to this evidence?" said the Court.

Nancy.—What have I to say? Why I hope I am at liberty to pass the civilities of the evening with a friend without being taken up! What does all this mean?

Court.—I should think you had been in the House of Correction, after one should think to understand the meaning of being brought here.

Nancy.—O yes, the House of Correction indeed! The fact is, after a person once gets sent to the House of Correction, they are sure to get stuck in again without doing half as bad as they did the first time.

Six months.

Thomas McKew was seen staggering along with a good oak stick, which he no doubt merely lifted from a neighboring wharf. When the watch called him to an account, and ordered him to replace the plunder, he swore that he had brought it from Charleston. The watch, who like other men, when they meditate evil, were very civil, and offered to go over the bridge with him. Mr McKew was fairly in for it, but coming to back out, he shouldered the log, and marched along till he came to the draw, where he pitched the log overboard, and set down his foot in defiance. A scuffle ensued, and the raps were pretty equally distributed round among all concerned. McKew was throttled and captured, and charged with drunkenness. He complained bitterly "that he had choked" his throat till they had squeezed the wind entirely out of him." He also asked—"How could I be drunk, seeing that I could find my way home, and could transact all my business?"

Court.—Why if your business was fighting, and that appears to have been your principal business last night, why some people do that best when they are drunk. $5.00 and costs.

Timothy Chadbourne, formerly a sheriff in Cumberland County, in the State of Maine, was brought up as a vagrant. He said—"I have no home nor money;" and added what was altogether unnecessary, after the preceding remark—"And I have neither friends nor acquaintances here, though I am poor, lame and sick." The most visible and vexatious of his misfortunes, he said nothing about. It is said of them, that they shall die and worms shall eat them; but Chadbourne was in great danger of being eaten up alive, by myriads of vermin, that swarmed over his tattered habiliment. He might, however, have regarded the evil, as his greatest honor, for he may have learnt that Sylla, the Dictator of Imperial Rome, and the proud victim of Marius, died even in the lap of luxury and affluence, by the teeth of the same voracious little enemy. Herod, the king of the Jews, also died a similar death. So much for the illustrious death, which awaits Chadbourne. In the meantime he will live and languish in the Alms-house.

Drowned.—In Easton, on Friday last, Daniel Macomber, ten years old son of Mr. B. F. Macomber, and a young lady named Davidson, about nineteen years of age. They were sliding upon the ice on Factory Pond, when it broke through and they were lost.

Florida—Important.—We received last night by the express mail a ship from the office of the Charleston, S. C. Courier, containing interesting particulars relative to the action of the army in Florida. They were brought by Col. Randall, late Adjutant and Inspector General of the Army in Florida, who retires from his command on the near approach of the Session of the Court of Appeals of Florida. Col. Randall is the bearer of Dispatches from Gov. Call to the Department at Washington. Nearly two columns are occupied in the Courier in giving the details of Gen. Call's movements, in which is contained an account of Maj. Morrie's death, and also Capt. Maitland's. The following is a summary view of the whole:—

The results of this campaign are, that the strongholds of the enemy, the cove of the Withlacoochee and the Wahoo, have been penetrated, and morasses explored hitherto unvisited by our armies; that the enemy have been defeated in four several battles, with great loss; that our troops have now shown them that neither the swamps nor the hammocks, with a numerical superiority, afford them safety or defence; and that nothing can insure the escape but some impassable barriers of nature; that inadequate supplies of provisions, to which the country can contribute nothing, alone were wanting to enable our troops to destroy the enemy utterly. This army may also boast that in all its marches through the country, encumbered as it was by an immense baggage train, the enemy, on no occasion, dared to assault it; nor did he, in any instance, cut off any of its detachments or convoys.

We further learn that the army is now at Volusia, receiving ample supplies of provisions, and that fresh horses are being transported to that point, to enable it speedily to enter upon another expedition. The Tennessee brigade, whose term of service will expire in this month, are eagerly looking forward to another fight with the enemy on the Withlacoochee, at which point it is proposed to embark them for their return to their homes. Should General Jesup, of whom nothing has been heard since his arrival at Tampa, be in a condition to follow up our blow on the Withlacoochee and Wahoo, into the very heart of which our trails will conduct him, the result may prove decisive. The enemy, weakened, defeated, and dispirited, can offer no effectual resistance to the five army commanded by that able officer. On the other hand, should the enemy have dispersed and retreated on the night of the 21st, as there is great reason to suppose, from the numerous small trails discovered by our spies on the 22d, all conveying into one large trail, leading to the south and east, the route expected to be pursued by General Jesup, from Tampa Bay, it is hoped may bring him in contact with the flying bands, in an open country, where their destruction will be inevitable.

At present, the army is engaged in re-constructing the stockade work and buildings at Volusia, to serve as a post and deposit for the army, and it will be ready in a few days to receive the ample supplies of provisions into it from Black Creek.

Gov. Call's health is yet very feeble, but he continues to struggle against this disease, and to sustain himself, in the midst of the most laborious duties and trying difficulties. He left Fort Drane just after his recovery from a dangerous fever, and soon after had twice to swim the Withlacoochee, and to encamp in the Cove without tents, and almost without fire, in cold rainy weather. His spirit and zeal for the service sustains him in a wonderful manner, amidst the greatest sufferings and privations, under an extreme prostration of bodily strength.

The alarm of fire, yesterday afternoon, was caused by the burning of the Sheet Iron Manufactory of Messrs. Dewhurst & Ivers, at South Boston. It was a large wooden building, and took fire on the roof, near the chimney.—The flames spread with such rapidity that but a small portion of the stock was saved. A small unoccupied dwelling house, lately built, and owned by Messrs. D. & I. was much damaged. We did not learn the loss, but it is probably several thousand dollars. We understand they were insured.

A man was run over by one of the engines passing to the fire and much injured.—Brigg's Bulletin.

Truth uttered by Accident.—A clergyman lately preached a ranting nonsensical sermon to the small edification of his audience. "Who is the person?" asked one of his hearers of an old lady, who had been equally a sufferer. "I don't know," she answered, "but he is one of the missionaries for the profanation of the Gospel, and he seems to be a master in his way." The good soul meant propitiation.

FOSTER'S OLD STAND.—116 Washington street.—B. F. FOSTER respectfully informs the public that his Commercial School is again removed to its Old Stand, where he will continue to give lessons as usual in Penmanship, Book Keeping and Arithmetic.

B. F. FOSTER is to render this establishment permanent, not by the new curriculum of so much per square edition, but by the new curriculum of so much per square edition, and its success to its own solid and intrinsic good qualities. With this end in view he will be, if possible, stimulated to greater exertion in the discharge of his duties, so as to render his school more and more deserving of public patronage.

FOSTER'S PRACTICAL PENMANSHIP.

Is so simple and effective as to eradicate the most confirmed scribble, and to substitute in its place a neat, rapid style of writing. From twenty to thirty lessons will, in most cases, be found sufficient, where the pupil has already some command of pen; yet no definite time is fixed, as the learner is entitled to a seat in the school until satisfied with his improvement.

BOOK-KEEPING, BY SINGLE AND DOUBLE ENTRY. Is taught in a practical manner—so much per square edition, and its success to its own solid and intrinsic good qualities. With this end in view he will be, if possible, stimulated to greater exertion in the discharge of his duties, so as to render his school more and more deserving of public patronage.

This is perhaps the only school in the city where the teacher combines in himself long practice in the counting house, joined to a close and applied study in the theory of this almost indispensable art. The decided advantages, therefore, which a practical Book-keeper has in teaching, over the mere theorist—who draws all his inferences from School Books alone—must be obvious to all.

In ARITHMETIC he will continue himself (unless by request) to the most essential rules, and to those calculations
